5,000 Soviets rally for reunification

Associated Press

MOSCOW — Thousands of Russians gathered at sunset Thursday to dream of a new dawn for their vanished empire.

Many of the 5,000 people who assembled in the square outside the Bolshoi Theater wept as they recalled how exactly three years ago they and their countrymen had voted in a referendum to keep the Soviet Union together.

Less than 10 months later, Mikhail Gorbachev signed the USSR out of existence and the tribulations of entering a new ideological world began.

"For these past three years not one step has been taken to ensure the dignity of the people," said Pyotr Kosachyuk, a 69-year-old Red Army veteran of World War II.

The rally, the largest in months by opponents of President Boris Yeltsin's reforms, was the latest sign that hard-liners are regrouping in Moscow.

A day earlier, a group of Communist, nationalist and other opposition leaders — including former Vice President Alexander Rutskoi — announced they were uniting into a political movement to "prevent the final collapse of historic Russia."

The same day, Rutskoi, who recently was released from prison after being pardoned for leading October's armed resistance to Yeltsin, urged people across the former Soviet Union to reunite into a single "great power."

"This is my homeland and I'm ready (again) to give my life for it," said Kosachyuk.

Speakers at the rally described the former Soviet republics as sloughs of economic turmoil and ethnic strife, and said things would be better if they all joined with Russia again under the Soviet banner.

While red Soviet flags waved in the breeze, the crowd observed a moment of silence "for the victims of the politics of Gorbachev and Yeltsin."

Russia's army newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda urged peace in a front-page editorial and said there was no going back to the USSR.

"Out of all the former Soviet people, only local elites are prospering," Krasnaya Zvezda said.

It added, "Russia isn't the same, and the entire former Soviet territory has changed greatly. So we ask all revolutionaries not to worry: We can't go back. We must build our common house anew. We must seek ways of unifying which wouldn't harm anyone's interests."

Despite the 1991 vote to keep the union, the coup that failed that August signaled the end of Soviet power.

Yeltsin and his free-market reforms won a strong vote of confidence in April 1993, long after he had presided over the disintegration of the Soviet Union and the creation of its successor, the looser Commonwealth of Independent States.

The president suffered his most recent political setback last month when Russia's new parliament granted amnesty to Rutskoi; the 1991 coup-plotters and other hard-line leaders.

Sarajevo opens road to allow civilian traffic to the outside world

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Serbs and Muslims gave Sarajevo hope Thursday when the city's crippling 23-month siege ended with a breakthrough agreement to partly open the road to the outside world.

The U.N.-brokered agreement, which also divided sectors of the capital to civilian traffic, is the latest and perhaps most significant sign that the Bosnian war is winding down. The accord is set to take effect

Wednesday.

Officials on both sides warned the city was far from free or united, and some residents expressed the skepticism borne of nearly two years of bloodletting among neighbors.

"The siege will not be over until all citizens can be transported freely," Hasan Muratovic, the Bosnian government's minister for relations with the United Nations, said after signing the agreement at Sarajevo airport.

But, he acknowledged, it was "the first very small step toward the (full) opening of Sarajevo."

Momcilo Krajisnik, speaker of the self-styled Bosnian Serb parliament, said the agreement would improve conditions in the city. But he refused to say whether and when Sarajevo would be united.

In Washington, meanwhile, U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher cautioned Thursday that an overall peace agreement to end 23 months of fighting is "a ways down the road. That agreement does not exist."

But he said that the United States hopes that an agreement to be signed Friday in Washington to create a Croat-Muslim federation in Bosnia would help push the peace process forward. The Serb-Muslim agreement signed Thursday does not permit commercial or military traffic on the road leading from Sarajevo to Visoko and on to Zenica in central Bosnia, but envisages free passage of civilians in buses or cars under U.N. escort.

The agreement follows the Serb withdrawal of artillery from around Sarajevo, under pressure from NATO, and a tentative agreement between the Muslim-led government and Bosnian Croats to stop fighting, reform their alliance and create a federation.

"The most important thing is that people can move inside the city," said Muratovic. "The next step will open so-called sea coast routes to Sarajevo. We are ready to sign immediately the opening of all roads."

Hatch's opponent for Senate race emerges from Democrat scramble

By BRADY LONG
Universe Staff Writer

With the state filing deadline by 11:59 p.m. on Tuesday, former candidate for governor Pat Shea officially announced he would run at the State Capitol that he would challenge Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch on the Democratic ticket in the U.S. Senate race.

Shea or another Democrat not running for candidacy by 5 p.m., Hatch would run unopposed.

Shea filed at the lieutenant governor's office at 4:30 p.m. and conducted a press conference at his home in Provo at 5 p.m. Shea, who lost in the Democratic primary for governor in 1992, surprised state Democrats Tuesday when he told them he was considering a Senate bid, said Todd Smith, State Democratic Committee executive director.

Smith said, "We've been planning to announce this by October," Taylor said.

Two weeks ago, the frontrunners for the nomination were Doug Anderson, a former Senate candidate, and Scott Howell, Utah Senate minority leader. Anderson announced Tuesday he would not run because his business partner was recently diagnosed with a serious illness and asked Anderson to run the business.

Shea met with Howell Thursday to discuss who would make a better candidate, Taylor said.

"It's came out of the blue, but he's a wonderful candidate," Taylor said.

Shea's success as an opponent to Hatch, who has never lost an election, is based on his national experience and his moderate views, Taylor said.

He said the friends Shea made in his 10 years as an assistant to the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee will help the campaign with fundraising and national exposure.

Taylor said Shea is pro-life and a conservative Democrat.

Area businesses work to draw LDS clientele

No one can put a price on eternal marriage — except Laddi Poyers, owner of the dating service "Latter Day Ideals," where, for a fee, you can meet your one-and-only Mormon mate.

Approximately 650 single adults in Utah who are members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are pulling out their checkbooks to meet an eternal companion through the dating service — one of many businesses in Utah Valley that markets directly to the LDS population.

The LDS Church will not endorse private businesses, said Don LeFevre, LDS Church spokesman, but organizations like Latter Day Ideals, Missionary Emporium and Living Scriptures make the LDS influence on the business community obvious in Provo.

On State Street a hand-painted sign above a used car lot reads "This is the place! Moorman Motors." The name of the business is a coincidence — the owner, Robert Moorman, is not LDS. Co-owner Pearl Moorman says they chose the name because it is catchy and draws the attention from the Mormon community.

Provo police report auto crime increase, rape decrease

Provo crime figures released today by the Provo Police Department show increases in the number of auto burglaries, traffic accidents, fatal traffic accidents, parking citations and shoplifting.

The largest increase, however, was in parking citations, which rose 65.4 percent from 1992 figures. Provo police issued 16,435 citations in 1993 compared to 9,936 citations for 1992.

Capt. George Pierpont of the Provo Police Department said the large increase in parking citations was mainly because of a new city ordinance that allows officers to write parking citations for parked cars with expired registration.

He said that unless a driver is parked in a driveway or on private property a citation can be issued.

Another area of concern is the increase in the sexual abuse of children in Provo.

According to the report, sexual abuse of children rose 8 percent over last year's totals. Police said 95 cases were reported in 1993.

This represents a continuing trend in Provo. According to police figures, the number of reported sexual abuses of children has increased 111 percent in five years from 1989 to 1993.

Police said the increase was a result of more children coming forward and is not necessarily an increase in activity by offenders.

The report also indicated some very positive trends in the decrease of some criminal activities.

The most significant reductions in criminal activities were in the areas of rape, robbery, business burglary, arson and sexual misconduct.

Two of the most positive reductions were in the area of rape and robbery.

According to the report, 34 rapes were reported to Provo police in 1993, compared to 46 in 1992. This is the first time in four years that the number of rapes has decreased. Reports document 30 incidences of rape in 1990 and 41 in 1991.

Robbery also decreased in 1993. Provo police reported 19 robberies compared to 28 in 1992.

Soldiers testify at Israeli massacre inquiry

JERUSALEM — Contradicting their superior officers, two soldiers testified Thursday that they fired directly at a mosque's doorway and not just in the air when they heard the pandemonium of the Hebron massacre last month.

They also said the Jewish settler blamed for the massacre did not enter the area with the weapon that the army says was used to gun down Muslims while they prayed Feb. 25, raising the possibility he had an accomplice.

Appearing at an Israeli inquiry, Sgts. Kobi Yosef and Niv Drori said they fired into a door leading to the mosque trying to keep panicky Arabs at bay because they feared they were about to be attacked by extremists.

"We were certain the Arabs were shooting (inside the mosque). In order to stop them from reaching us, we fired at the door," Drori said.

Palestinian witnesses have said at least one worshiper was killed and others wounded by soldiers in the mosque area during the chaos of massacre.

The army has said no Palestinians were shot by soldiers at the mosque, and Yosef and Drori insisted their chest-high shots did not hit anyone.

Airlines agree to Justice Dept. price rules

WASHINGTON — Six major airlines agreed to new rules Thursday designed to prevent what the Justice Department said was price-fixing that cost air travelers up to $1.9 billion from 1988 through 1992.

Justice lawyers identified more than 50 separate price-fixing agreements covering hundreds of routes, Assistant Attorney General Anne K. Bingaman said at a news conference.

The airlines negotiated these agreements by sending each other elaborate signals about planned price changes over their jointly owned computerized ticket information system, according to Bingaman, head of the antitrust division.

As a result of one agreement, consumers paid $138 more for travel between Chicago and Dallas, the department said. In another, airlines agreed to raise discount one-way fares by $20.

California residents angry over rapist's release

ALTURAS, Calif. — The governor wanted to exile a paroled serial rapist to "the most remote location possible." The people of rural Modoc County thought otherwise. And on Thursday, after hundreds rallied in front of the courthouse here, a judge ordered Melvin Carter to remain behind bars.

"He's got no business using us as a garbage dump for all their scum," telephone company worker Art Fleenor said, referring to Gov. Pete Wilson.

Carter, scheduled for release in this high desert county of 10,000 residents in the far northeastern corner of California, is the latest to draw opposition from people who didn't want a paroled criminal as a neighbor.

Carter pleaded no contest in 1982 to 23 counts of rape, assault, burglary and attempted burglary in the San Francisco Bay Area. He confessed to as many as 100 rapes, said Alameda County Deputy District Attorney Michael Roemer.

State, county agree on Utah Lake boundaries

An agreement on the boundaries surrounding Utah Lake ended a seven-year dispute between Utah County and state officials Wednesday.

According to the agreement, the boundary between the state-owned and county-owned property begins just west of an abandoned canal on the lake's extreme northwest side. The county land is on the west side of that boundary.

The agreement "allows the county to have full use and enjoyment of the property owned near the lake," Naylor said. "It makes it possible for the county to build a boat harbor, if officials want to."

The state and county have disagreed on the boundary since 1987, when the U.S. Supreme Court turned ownership of the lake bed over to the state.

Still delayed in Utah County Planning and Zoning meetings is a proposed zone change for more than 500 acres located near the Saratoga Resort, just west of Utah Lake and near Lehi.

Those changes would allow the property owners to build a planned unit development, including nearly 600 one-family homes, an 18-hole golf course, jogging and biking trails, possible retail stores and a Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints meetinghouse.

Honor Code violations, discipline handled by individual groups at Y

By SCOTT BRIGHTON
Universe Staff Writer

Assistant Dean of Student Life Tom Kallunki said the library, testing center, guest services, food services and on-campus housing employees enforce their own policies and seldom report students to the Honor Code office.

"They take care of themselves," Kallunki said. "They only report a case to the Honor Code office if someone really gives them a hard time."

A student can be referred by other students, the police, ecclesiastical leaders, roommates and by implication if mentioned in another confession.

Students should report a problem to help the offending student before the problem becomes enormous.

Kallunki said people will just sit back and watch others get into trouble thinking, "that's none of my business."

"The Honor Code office believes we are our brother's keeper," Kallunki said. "I hear quite often students say, 'I know there are problems here,' but do they care enough to do something about it?"

Students referred for problems with shorts, beards, earrings, respecting others, inappropriate language, tobacco, tea or coffee, are referred to the Honor Code Council, comprised of about 20 students.

Local youth collects material for homeless

By AMY LEEMAN
Universe Staff Writer

BYU staff member's daughter is helping with BYUSA's Community Service division to create personal care items for the homeless in Utah County.

Kasielyn Peterman, 14, daughter of BYU's Crew General Manager Roy Peterman, is collecting personal care items and making sack lunches to be distributed through United Way to homeless people in the area.

Peterman is a member of the Future Teachers of America club at Provo Junior High School.

The club sponsors nation-wide competitions among its members to promote community service and home economics skills.

"I am president of my class, I wanted to support the club by doing a project," Peterman said.

She said that there were some homeless people and decided there were things they would need."

Peterman has collected combs, brushes, toilet paper, toothbrushes and toothpaste, soap and other items from Provo residents.

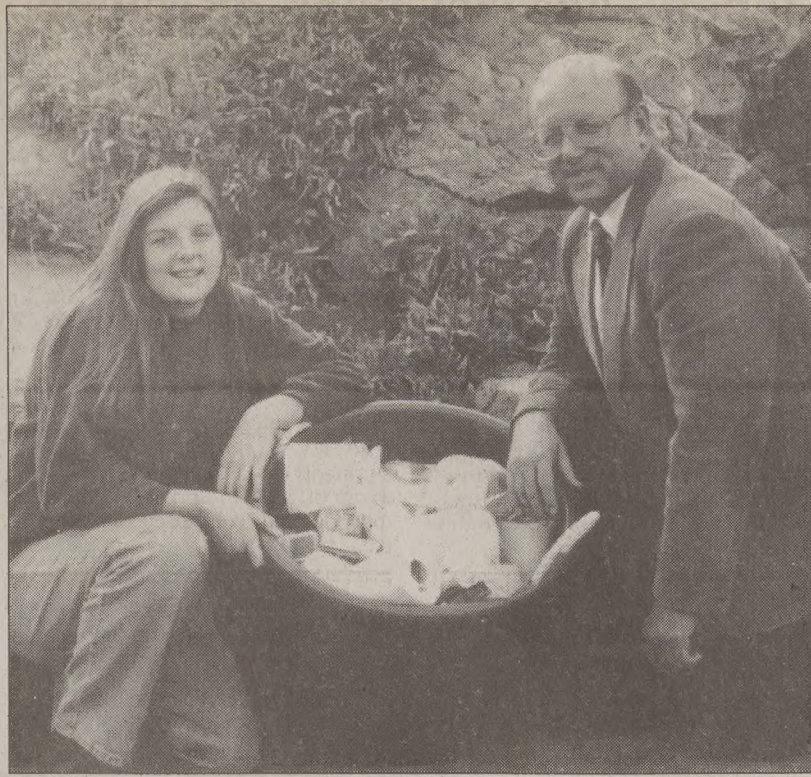

She said she looked in books to find out the needs of homeless people and called United Way to get the telephone numbers and locations where the items could be donated.

Peterman is also working with BYUSA's Community Service division.

Her project was put on BYUSA's list of service projects, and flyers have been distributed inviting other groups to help with the drive.

"Her's is a unique case because she's not a student here," said Laura Talbot, vice president of community service at BYUSA.

Talbot said BYUSA Community Services are not generally used by younger students in the Provo area, but the services are available for anyone's use.

CARE-PACKAGE FOR THE HOMELESS: Kasielyn Peterman and her father Roy Peterman, a BYU staff member, show a sampling of the goodies Kasielyn has gathered for the homeless in Utah County.

"It's exciting how she's come here to help," Talbot said.

"I am expecting a lot of donations," Peterman said.

The FHA competition will be held in Salt Lake City on March 26.

The winners will go on to the national competition in Florida.

"I'm a believer in volunteer services. That's what makes America tick," Roy Peterman said.

"This has been an opportunity for (Kasielyn) to learn through the service she does."

Alamo Film Competition offers contest for students

By JENNIFER CARR
Universe Lifestyle Writer

Students can win various prizes by entering their student-produced films in the Alamo American Film Competition for Students, including a cellular phone and $2,000 in cash and grants.

Alamo Rent-A-Car is sponsoring the only corporate backed student film competition in the United States. In all, the awards for the competition will total more than $20,000, according to a press release from The Alamo Film Competition for Students.

Five categories will be judged by film professionals. Each first place winner will receive $1,000, each second place winner will receive $500 and third place will receive $250.

The five categories are narrative, documentary, experimental film, music video and public service announcement.

"What we're unveiling is a new national platform that will provide the recognition and encouragement that America's most promising student filmmakers need to excel in their art form," said Charles D. Platt, Alamo's president and chief operating officer.

"The competition started as a statewide competition in Florida," said

Tracy Tilson of Tilson & Associates. "Alamo expanded the competition because of an overwhelming positive response from students and educators."

In the past, people such as Martin Scorsese and Burt Reynolds have been involved with the film competitions. This year Edward James Olmos and Peter Bogdanovich, two leading filmmakers, will be advisers to the competition.

Other advisers include Jim Fargo, James Bond III, Matt Dorf, Kim Dawson, Louis Feola, Ted Kurdyla and David Werner.

Winning entries will be distributed to major film industry executives and studios so that outstanding student filmmakers can receive the recognition they deserve, said Linda D'Olympio, Alamo manager of community affairs.

All entries must be from students at a U.S. college or university and may not have any professional assistance. The video cassette should be NTSC VHS three quarter-inch. The deadline is June 3. Winners will be announced later in June.

A base entry fee of $25 is required for the competition or $35 to receive a T-shirt. An entry form may be obtained by calling (407) 392-4988.

Mormon Youth Symphony gives Easter concert

By LAURZIA LEE
Universe Lifestyle Writer

Individuals can get into the Easter spirit with a little help from the Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus, who will be giving an Easter concert at the Salt Lake Tabernacle Saturday.

The concert will begin at 8 p.m., but the doors will open at 7 p.m. The concert is free for individuals 8 and older.

The symphony and chorus will perform a variety of religious pieces related to the Easter season, including "Blessed Are They" by Johannes Brahms, "Sanctus" by Charles Gounod and "Christ the Lord is Risen Today."

Robert C. Bowden, musical director and conductor of the Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus, arranged the version of "Christ the Lord is Risen Today" that will be performed at the concert.

A number of favorite hymns will also be performed, including "How Great Thou Art," "Amazing Grace," "O Lord God" and "The Holy City." The Easter concert, which the Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus performs annually, has become a popular performance, said Jenny Pedersen, a staff assistant with the Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus.

"We usually have a near capacity crowd at the tabernacle," Pedersen said.

The symphony and chorus, which now includes 400 members, is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year. Bowden has been the conductor for the past 20 years.

The Mormon Youth Symphony Chorus was originally started to vide music for the Sterling W. radio program on Sunday even Pedersen said.

Gender-roles reversed in Shakespeare play

By TIFFANY CRAMER ELIASON
Universe Lifestyle Writer

William Shakespeare wrote about taming a shrewish woman but now the Westminster Players of the Westminster College of Salt Lake City are using a fictional Judith Shakespeare for a gender reversal in "Taming of the Shrew."

"The nontraditional part of the play is the gender role reversal," said Jeannie Spackman, administrative assistant at Westminster College.

Tamara Compton, assistant professor of theater and speech, said she formulated this gender-reversal idea in 1988 while teaching at Dakota State University.

"It's quite eye-opening," Compton said. "It lets you step in the other one's shoes to get another perspective. It's all done with humor, not beating people over the head."

Compton said they adapted an idea from Virginia Woolf's book, "A Room of One's Own."

"In a chapter of the book Woolf wonders what would have happened if Shakespeare had a sister who was equally as talented as he was,"

Compton said.

Woolf names the fictitious sister Judith and tells the story of this talented woman who cannot succeed because she is woman in a time unprepared for feminine success.

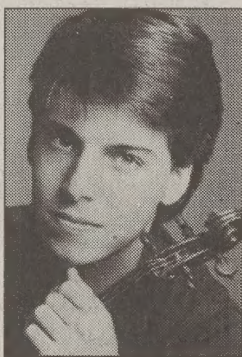

"Judith Shakespeare is a part of our play. She does her version of her brother's script — she puts men in women's roles and the women get the men's roles which are far better written roles," Compton said.

The performance will be in the Jay W. Lee's Courage Theatre at Westminster College. For further information call 488-4112.

This nontraditional production, and a green show in the lobby featuring musicians, food and games will be performed through Saturday. The green show begins at 7:30 p.m. and the performance at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Violinist Joshua Bell will join the Utah Symphony today and Saturday in the performance of Tchaikovsky's "Violin Concerto."

The concert, which is part of the Utah Symphony Classical Series, will also feature Dvorak's "Scherzo Capriccioso" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 1."

JOSHUA BELL

Both performances will begin at 8 p.m. in Abravanel Hall in Salt Lake City. Tickets range from $11 to $32 and can be purchased at the box office. Student discount tickets are available for $5.

Bell demonstrated his musical talent at a very young age, performing professionally by the age of 14 with the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Before the age of 20, Bell made his soloist debut at Carnegie Hall with the St. Louis Symphony, was awarded the Avery Fisher Career Grant and signed a record contract with London/Decca Records.

Bell, now 27, has toured all over the United States and Europe, performing with some of the most prominent symphonies and orchestras in the world.

This concert will be his debut performance with the Utah Symphony, said Ashlie Esco, a public relations intern at the Utah Symphony.

He is one of the youngest guest performers the symphony will feature this year, Esco said.

Bell has gained quite a following in the United States, especially among the younger adult audiences, she said.

The Utah Symphony Classical Series offers individuals an opportunity to enjoy live performances of their favorite classical pieces or to develop an appreciation for classical music.

The music for each concert is selected to complement the talents of the guest artist and the symphony or to go along with a certain theme, Esco said.

Kidd-ing' Cal loses to Wisconsin-Green Bay

By JOSH LUKE
Assistant Sports Editor

When Wisconsin-Green Bay received an invitation to the NCAA tournament, they ignored the fact that their first round opponent was Cal, whose point guard, Jason Kidd, is the best point guard to play in the NCAA since Earvin "Magic" Johnson.

The Phoenix of UWGB did not want to "kid" around, they came to the game and when Kidd missed a 19-foot jump shot with 15 seconds left, the Phoenix pulled off the biggest victory of this year's tournament with a 63-57 victory over Cal.

The Bears got off to a slow start winning only two points in the first half. UWGB, one of the tourney's "hyphen schools," trailed the lead to 21-7 with 7:48 left in the first half before Cal called a timeout and began to get into the game. Cal made a short score before halftime and finished the half trailing by a score of 32-23.

That is about as poor of a first half as Cal have played all year," Cal coach Todd Bozeman said. "You can't give their coaching staff a lot of credit, they played a great game.

Third team AP All-American forward Lamond Murray started off the second half on fire after struggling from the floor in the first half, and Cal's first lead of 51-50 came with 6:34 to play in the game.

The score was knotted at 57 with 2:07 to go before Kidd stole the ball and then turned it back over at the other end of the court.

UWGB's Jeff Nordgaard hit a 15-foot baseline shot with 32 seconds to play to give the Phoenix a 59-57 lead. After Kidd missed the 19-foot jumper, the Bears fouled Phoenix point guard John Martinez, who nailed two straight free throws to give UWGB a four-point lead.

"I am taking the blame for this loss, it was my fault," Kidd said.

Cal coaches and players disagreed.

"That is just Jason," said Monty Buckley. "We win as a team and we lose as a team, it is not one person's fault."

Murray missed a three-point shot for Cal with three seconds to play and Cal was booked on an early flight back to the bay area.

The conclusion of the Bears' season means that an announcement on whether or not Kidd and Murray will leave for the NBA is near.

"I am not in a rush to make any decisions," Kidd said. "I am going to go back to Berkeley and go to class and relax for a while before I worry about it."

As for Murray, he did not think the shock of the first round loss had sunk in quite yet.

"I don't think it has really hit me yet," he said. "It will probably hit me on the plane ride home, or when I wake up tomorrow."

One reporter asked Kidd if he would leave for the NBA if offered 50 million dollars. Jokingly Kidd replied that "it was going to take more than that."

Apparently it took a little more than Cal thought it would to beat that notorious "hyphen school," UWGB.

Nordgaard led all scorers with 24 points and nine rebounds, Murray led Cal with 18 points, Kidd added 12, and they both pulled down 11 rebounds each. Both UWGB's Martinez, and Cal's Kidd, dished out seven assists on the day. Hawaii lost the early game to Syracuse after leading for the majority of the game.

Robbie Reid jump-starts Cougars to victory, 74-67

By JEFF HANSON
Universe Sports Writer

Freshman Robbie Reid made all of his first career college start, responding to the pressure by scoring 14 points and pulling down eight rebounds as BYU defeated Arizona State 74-67 in the first round of the NIT last night in the Marriott Center.

The win set up a fourth meeting with WAC rival Fresno State, with time and date still to be announced.

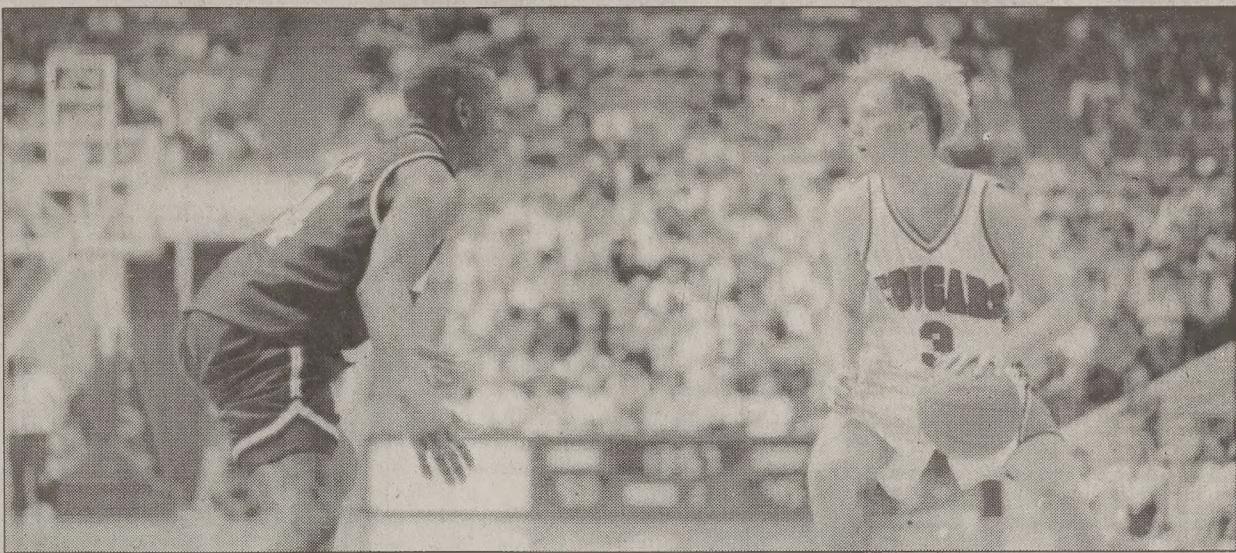

As players from both teams were going through their pre-game warm-ups, Sun Devil guard Stevin "Hedake" Smith started to talk to Robbie.

It was not about Sunday School, either.

"I think stuff like that motivates me," Robbie said. "I know he's a great player, and it's not personal. But it does motivate me."

The trash-talking between the two players continued throughout the game, but instead of folding, the BYU freshman played the game of his career.

"(Robbie) stepped up big tonight," Coach Roger Reid said. "He might miss shots, but nobody's going to intimidate him."

Cristina Houston/Daily Universe

STATIC PERFORMANCE: Robbie Reid, starting in place of the injured Kurt Christensen, drives on Arizona State's Quincy Brewer. Reid finished the game with 14 points and 8 rebounds

Russell Larson, who ended the game with 22 points and nine rebounds, gave the younger Reid brother a lot of credit.

"Robbie's always been a fighter," Larson said. "He could miss 20 shots in a row, and still pull it out in the end."

With time running out in the first half and the Cougars down 33-29, Robbie hit two straight three-pointers that not only gave BYU a 35-33 half-time lead, it woke up the 8,348 Cougar faithful in the Marriott Center.

In the second half, Russell Larson scored eight of the first ten Cougar points, and Robbie gave Smith a "headache" of his own, causing the Sun Devil star to foul out of the game, while Reid committed only one foul of his own.

More importantly, he only had two of the team's 11 turnovers. BYU turned the ball over 27 times in their last meeting with ASU.

With nine minutes left in the game, Roberts picked up his fourth personal foul. With Larson already on the bench with four fouls, the Devils tied the game at 59, led by ASU's Mario Bennett, who ended the game with 10 points and a game-high 15 rebounds.

With five minutes left, however, Coach Reid sent his two front-court stars back into the game, and the duo scored eight of the Cougars' last 13 points.

"We just looked at each other," Roberts said. "We knew what we had to do."

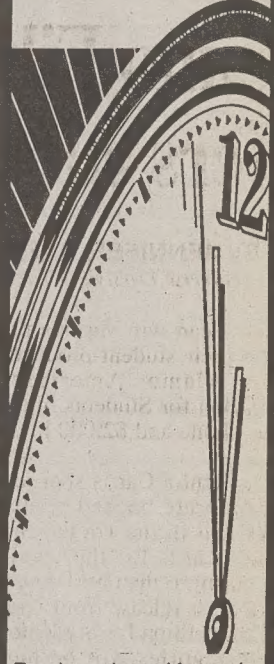

BYU kept things interesting, however, as the Cougars missed seven of 12 free throws down the wire, but when Shane Knight forced a jump ball with a Sun Devil rebounder with 20.1 seconds left after a missed free throw, the ball went back to the Cougars and they never looked back.

"This team still deserves to be in the NCAA tournament," Reid said. "I was happy with the way the guys responded. We had a makeshift team all night."

Utah middle school teacher files suit against student

Associated Press

MURRAY, Utah — A science teacher at the South Jordan Middle School has filed a civil lawsuit against a 15-year-old student accused of kicking and hitting her.

The suit, filed in 5th Circuit Court in Murray, seeks $4,500 in medical costs and exemplary damages.

Teacher Susan Atkin claims the student became violent when she asked him to remove his hat while in school.

She said she took the hat from his head after asking him three times to remove it.

Atkin said she then tried to convince the student to join her outside the building, where she said she would give him back his hat.

The suit alleges that the boy responded by shouting obscenities, kicking her and striking her in the face and knocking off her eyeglasses.

Atkin received medical treatment for injuries to the left side of her face, including bruises, contusions and a jaw injury. She missed several days of school and was nervous about returning, said Michael McCoy, attorney for the Utah Education Association, who represents Atkin.

The student was excluded from school for 11 days and attended several hearings with school officials and his parents, said Jordan District spokeswoman Patty Dahl.

Lots of attention

Combined ROTC units presented the "Leadership Excellence Award" to Elder John R. Lasater of the Second Quorum of the Seventy of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (who is also a major general) during an ROTC presidential review Thursday afternoon. Elder Lasater was selected for both his military and church service, said Capt. Scott H. Faulring of the Air Force ROTC. Elder Lasater told the Army and Air Force cadets that all the armed forces need to work together. "Teamwork now is the motto and battle cry of all our services," Lasater said.

Law grads do time in court

By AMY RAE LEMON
Universe Staff Writer

The 4th District Court is fostering a unique program in Utah where the court bailiffs double as court law clerks.

The bailiffs are law school graduates that are interning before they begin to actually practice the law.

Phil Hardy graduated from the University of Utah last May and decided to intern as a law clerk for the experience.

"In one year interning as a law clerk you see more in-court proceedings than some practicing attorneys see in five or six years," Hardy said.

Hardy has been able to see the mistakes a new attorney can make and said he hopes to avoid them.

"I feel like I will be a lot more prepared to practice," Hardy said. "You learn what to do and what not to do."

Each law clerk is assigned to a judge who they are able to utilize their research and writing skills for.

"Everyday we go through the motions that have been filed," Hardy said. "We read through the motions and research them."

Clerks draft memos for the judges that explain how the attorneys perceived the law. They also suggest how the judge should rule.

The judge will review the memo and, if necessary, ask questions.

"It is kind of scary at first because what you recommend has a lot of influence," Hardy said. "The judge is relying on what you study and research."

Other responsibilities include reviewing the docket, a case pending list, on a monthly basis. If a case has been inactive for six months then a clerk will send notice for an order to show cause which tells the court why it should not dismiss the case.

Teacher Susan Atkin claims the student became violent when she asked him to remove his hat while in school.

She said she took the hat from his head after asking him three times to remove it.

Atkin said she then tried to convince the student to join her outside the building, where she said she would give him back his hat.

The suit alleges that the boy responded by shouting obscenities, kicking her and striking her in the face and knocking off her eyeglasses.

Atkin received medical treatment for injuries to the left side of her face, including bruises, contusions and a jaw injury. She missed several days of school and was nervous about returning, said Michael McCoy, attorney for the Utah Education Association, who represents Atkin.

The student was excluded from school for 11 days and attended several hearings with school officials and his parents, said Jordan District spokeswoman Patty Dahl.

Somali future uncertain as U.S. troops pull out

By AMY CRAGUN
Universe Staff Writer

With the deadline for complete withdrawal of U.S. troops quickly approaching, the United States examines the successes and failures of its mission to Somalia while the Somalis face an uncertain future.

With the exception of about 2000 Marines who will remain just off the coast, U.S. troops will be out of Somalia by March 31.

"Anarchy is quite a legitimate scenario for Somalia," said Howard Lehman, associate professor of political science at the University of Utah.

Dennis Thompson, professor of political science at Brigham Young University said Somalia has as much possibility for a good future as most other African countries. He said there aren't as many ethnic or population problems in Somalia as in other African nations and its agriculture is well-developed in some areas.

There has been drought, Thompson said, but not to the same extent as in surrounding countries. He said Somalia would be relatively prosperous if fighting would stop so food could be circulated.

Lehman said Somalia needs political stability in order to get food circulating again and that may have to come through an authoritarian dictatorship.

Dictatorship is helpful in some situations, Lehman said, especially if there is a good strategy for economic development. Cooperation would require negotiations or a peace agreement between rival clans.

In an interview with CNN, Robert Oakley, U.S. Special Envoy to Somalia, said peace talks between the clans to be held in Nairobi, Kenya, are the last chance to pull the country together.

Lehman said General Mohammad Farah Aidid would probably have the most influence on the talks since he has been more vocal and more active in mobilizing his people against U.S. and U.N. troops than his rivals.

Lehman said Aidid and rival clan leader Mohammad Hersi Morgan worked together to overthrow the former leader, after which they each appointed themselves leader. When it appeared to Aidid that the U.N. and, more specifically, the United States took sides with Morgan, he started a campaign of resistance against U.N. troops.

Aidid has won some symbolic victories that would put him in a position to negotiate with the U.N., Lehman said.

Lehman said the U.S. pull-out from Somalia is a symbolic victory for Aidid, but on another level the mission was successful.

Before U.S. and U.N. involvement, there was total breakdown in Somalia, Lehman said. Problems such as gang activity and theft of food shipments don't occur as much now, and food is getting to people who need it. In that aspect the mission was successful.

We have paid a price for taking sides in a civil war, Oakley said. We were overambitious and too deeply involved, and that caused a backlash, he said.

"We came in with high expectations to build a democracy in Somalia, but that couldn't be done," Lehman said. In feeding the people we were successful, he added.

Thompson said the extent of that success is questionable. The U.S. was successful in the area in which it operated, but there was no attempt to penetrate into the countryside.

Fighting was stopped and food distribution successful in Mogadishu and Kismayu, Thompson said.

U.S. soldiers in Somalia have been discouraged because of apparent political apathy among the Somali people.

The problem has been blamed on the daily fight against starvation that faces many Somalis.

When faced with a choice between survival and participation in creating political stability, "I think it's a universal principle that most people will favor food in their stomachs," Lehman said.

Community service can cure family home evening blahs

By KAMILLE THORNE
Universe Staff Writer

With the end of the school year in sight, family home evening groups are racking their brains for yet another creative Monday night activity. Service projects sponsored by the United Way may be the answer.

"Family home evening groups can grow closer together when they serve together," said Lile Lavaki, director of the United Way Volunteer Center.

Several Provo/Orem organizations are in need of one-time volunteer service.

"There are a variety of service opportunities currently available," said Julie Christensen, public relations director of the United Way. "By donating just a little time, family home evening groups can really make a difference."

HAPPY 'FAMILY': Home evening groups can give others brighter birthdays through service projects such as making cakes for the Utah State Developmental Center.

Groups can bake cakes that will be frozen and later served on birthdays or during family home evenings for 375 disabled residents at the Utah State Developmental Center.

"Baking cakes is a great way for individuals to provide service without actually having to donate time here at the center," said Vicki Gurney, coordinator of the Utah State Developmental Center.

A food drive recently conducted by the Boy Scouts has left the Community Action Foodbank with a need for volunteers to assist with the food that was received.

"The food bank fortunately received a great deal of food from the recent food drive," Christensen said.

"There is now a tremendous need for groups that can help to sort and put that food to proper use."

Flannel boards and story figures are needed at the Family Support and Treatment Center, where an average of 550 children are cared for each month.

Environmental groups plan meatless Sunday

By JERSHA BIGELOW
Universe Staff Writer

In conjunction with a national movement advocating a meatless diet, a group of BYU students will sponsor a meatless potluck and attend a protest against meat eating.

As part of the Great American Meatout, members of the Eco-Response Club, in conjunction with a group of conservation biology students, will host a meatless dinner on Sunday to promote a meat-free diet.

On Saturday and Sunday, some students from BYU will join with other non-meat eaters to protest the prevalent use of meat in today's society. The protestors will meet in Salt Lake City at the McDonald's across from Temple Square at Crossroads Mall.

The Great American Meatout was organized in 1985 by the Farm Animal Reform Movement (FARM), a nonprofit, public-interest group formed in 1981 to fight against animal abuse and factory farming. The Meatout triggered nearly 1,000 events across the nation and in Canada last year, according to information released by FARM.

The group encourages people to "kick the meat habit on March 20 (first day of spring), at least for the day, and explore a less violent diet."

Group members cite both health and environmental benefits for not eating meat as they quote numerous studies on meat consumption.

FARM states that meat production accounts for 96 percent of the six billion animals that are killed in the United States every year.

The group also reports the health benefits of not eating meat.

For instance, FARM quotes a Feb. 13 article from The Washington Post stating that 20,000 E. coli infections occur per year in the U.S., some of them fatal, though most go unreported. E. coli are found mainly in ground beef and milk, The Washington Post says.

Harding faces bleak future after guilty plea

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Her competitive skating career is finished, she reportedly is nearly broke and her life is a mess.

Yet Tonya Harding was back on the ice again Thursday less than 24 hours after pleading guilty to a conspiracy charge for her role in the attack on former figure skating rival Nancy Kerrigan.

As part of a plea bargain, Harding

She was grumpy when she showed up at the suburban shopping mall Thursday, telling reporters to "quit bugging me" as she walked to the rink.

She practiced a few jumps, crashing to the wall once and hurting her right knee slightly, but joking as she was helped up by training partner Angela Meduna.

munity. The owners say they do not really care what their customers' religious domination is.

The owner of Latter Day Ideals, on the other hand, says she has to be more selective about the religious background of her clients.

The company is an "introduction agency" exclusively for single LDS adults, said Poyurs, owner of the agency.

"The whole purpose for this organization is introduction to the end of eternal marriage," she said.

"The people who come to us are single people who are looking for other single people who share their same values but are too busy to do the bar-stool scene. We aren't dealing with losers here."

"All applicants who wish to join Latter Day Ideals must verify that they are LDS," Poyurs said. "If they claim they hold a current temple recommendation, the agency verifies that by asking to see it."

The Provo office is one of three Latter Day Ideals offices in Utah. The other offices are located in Salt Lake City and Ogden.

The Salt Lake office has been in operation since 1981, but the Provo office has only been open for about eight months, Poyurs said.

"We do not do matchmaking," Poyurs said.

"People come in and select who they would like to meet from our folders. When the selection is made, we invite that person to come in and look at the file of the person who has selected them. If there is mutual consent, we release phone numbers to the clients."

The clients' contracts designate that the man should make the initial contact in the relationship, Poyurs said. "We are very traditional that way," she said.

The agency keeps profiles of the clients, covering their interests, marital status and church standing.

The agency also checks out whether the clients pay full tithing and whether they shop on Sundays.

The portfolio also includes photographs of the clients. Most of the photos show the clients skiing, hiking, swimming or playing with children.

The average age of clients at Latter Day Ideals is 40, Poyurs said. Quite a few BYU students come to the agency with interest in finding a companion, but they also tend to be in the older range, she said.

Poyurs said she considers the fee for her services very reasonable, but some people find it to be too expensive. She would not quote the exact price a client would pay to be allowed to browse the files.

"There are just so many different programs here to work with," she said.

Other businesses in Provo cater to the Mormon population, though not so exclusively.

Most of the people who shop in the Missionary Emporium, a store in the University Mall featuring mission stickers, shirts and LDS books, are women who have a son or boyfriend out in the mission field, said Cindy Dalton, assistant manager of the store.

Missionary Emporium will soon include "your LDS family bookstore" in its motto so people will not think it is just for missionaries, she said.

The store has done well in Utah, and many people have asked that a store open in Idaho, also a predominantly Mormon community, Dalton said.

Other businesses appeal to the more practical Mormon population.

Passersby first receive a clue that the Out-N-Back store sells products geared to Mormons by its logo — "Your 72-hour supply headquarters." Store owners say they hope to draw the attention of Mormons.

But Out-N-Back does not mention the Church in any advertisements, said co-owner Mary Pier. She just wants to attract those who are interested in emergency preparation, especially campers, she said.

Dried and canned food storage and 72-hour survival kits, about one-fifth of the store's inventory, is geared to
